Task 2: True, False or Not Given²

_____ / 10 points

Look at the statements below about the popularity of TV. Read the text on the next page and say for each statement if it is true or false, or if the information is not given in the text.

There is an example at the beginning (0).

Write T (true) or F (false) or NG (not given) for each statement.

		T or F or NG
0	Tom Collins is a TV journalist.	NG
1	According to some people, TV is not as good as it used to be.
2	The author disagrees that people use the Internet for entertainment more often.
3	The author says that the variety and quality of the programs on TV are still appreciated by many people.
4	The author believes the news on TV more than the news on the internet.
5	The author says people spend too much time flipping through TV channels.
6	Watching important events on TV together with others makes these events unforgettable.
7	Like TV, the Internet can bring the whole country and people of all ages together.
8	According to the author, the content on the internet is a lot worse than the programs on TV.
9	The author believes that content on the Internet should be checked and controlled by professionals, like it is on TV.
10	The author thinks that the TV will stay relevant for some time to come.

The End of TV? – Tom Collins Offers His Opinion

Some people say that TV is no longer good, and that it has lost its attraction and importance. They argue that nowadays, more people use the Internet for both entertainment and information.

People do spend more time watching videos on the Internet, but I don't think this means the end of TV. Many of us still enjoy watching TV at home. It gives us the chance to see great musicians, good movies, and watch interesting documentaries, as well as the latest news.

You can read the news on the Internet too, however, a lot of the content is not true or can't be trusted. I like watching the evening news on TV because I'm more likely to believe it than things I read online. Anyone can put information on the Internet, and a lot of it is just opinions, not facts.

While the Internet is fascinating and has an almost endless amount of content, not everyone wants to spend time searching for videos or deciding what to watch next. TV is less overwhelming – you turn it on, flip through channels, and find something interesting. It's a familiar and easy way to relax, especially after a long day. So, despite the growing influence of the Internet, the good old television still holds a special place in our lives.

Broadcasting major national or cultural events on TV can bring the whole country and people of all ages together. This has a way of making important moments memorable. The Internet can't do that. How often do friends or families all watch something together online? Think about big sporting events, like the World Cup or the Olympics. These are events when people get around their TVs, share the moment, and become part of a larger community watching the same event. The Internet may give us clips or highlights, but it lacks the shared experience that television has during such live broadcasts.

Some say the TV has bad shows on many of its channels. It's true that some channels repeat old shows or have cheap programs, but I think a lot of Internet content is not great either. At least TV shows have professionals making sure the shows are reasonably good, which a lot of web content doesn't have.

So I don't think we should say goodbye to the TV too quickly. I'm sure it will be around for many more years. I won't trade my TV for the newest laptop anytime soon and will keep enjoying it in the evenings.

Recommended Museums in the Area

A) Red House Travel back to the time of the writer Charlotte Brontë and find out about her friends and local connections. Discover the comforts and discomforts of the 1830s where Charlotte sometimes stayed as a guest of Joseph Taylor's family and got ideas for her novel Shirley.	B) Castle Museum The castle was built looking down on the valley of the River Dean. It is now a museum, where you can learn how the valley has changed over millions of years. There is a collection of fossils found in the area, and pictures showing how the valley probably looked in prehistoric times.
C) Hillcrest Museum Enjoy an experience of digging up the past. Handle pieces of ancient pots, tools and other objects from many countries. Learn to date them and see what they tell us about how people lived then. Also try out computer programs which help plan the digging up of sites. School groups should book in advance.	D) Shandy Hall Here in the 1760s, Lawrence Sterne wrote Tristram Shandy. His fifteenth-century house is now surrounded by a large garden full of beautiful and unusual plants. Inside there is an important collection of Sterne's books plus the original drawings which were included in his works.
E) Museum of Peace Situated in beautiful countryside, this is the only museum of its kind in the country. It has a growing collection of art and objects connected with peace history, non-violence and the ending of war. It also has materials which can be used after the visit back in the classroom.	F) Fishing Centre Study the routes used by fishermen over the last two hundred years and see how their ocean-going boats worked. A new exhibition explores the position of wives and mothers in the old fishing towns, giving information about their jobs and their attitudes to their attitudes to work and home.
G) Viking Centre Come and experience what life was like 1200 years ago in this Viking town, rebuilt at the mouth of the river. Our introductory talk will inform you about the close relationship Vikings had to the sea - they were excellent fishermen sailors and boat-builders. There are also tools, clothes and everyday items to look at.	H) Horsepower Museum This museum reminds us just how important horses were to life in the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. It has a permanent exhibition of old trams and buses, which used to be pulled through the streets by horses. The staff are very knowledgeable and give daily lectures on this fascinating collection.
